WAGE NEEDED HERE ON 1893 STANDARD FIGURED AT $2,800

Classifiers Say This Sum Would Keep Up Level Of Living.

Government employes in Wash ington should receive $2,800 a year to enjoy the standard of living of 1893, according to figures published yesterday in The Federal Employe.
The information was compiled by the International Labor office from data gathered by the joint commis-sion on reclassification, and indi-cates that in 1893 the average government employe received $1.096 year. The average rose nearly 40 per cent. the per cent, the maximum being $1.536 in 1919. The latter figure includes the bonus and is considered abnor-Average in 1920. The average salary for 1920 was 1.191. This is said to be very close to the present salary. But the purchasing power of the dollar has fallen so rapidly that $1,535, the salary of 1919, was actually worth only $572, the publication says.

Interesting data taken from old government records as to the value of money 25 years ago are given: Chicken was then worth 14 cents a pound; milk, 17 quarts for $1; corn-meal, 2 cents a pound, and butter as low as 15 cents a pound.

During the panic years, according to the figures, the average federal worker fared very well, as his salary was stationary and the de-clining prices of commodities en-abled him to purchase much more. Beginning with 1901 the "dilution will observe children's day with a sermon by Rev. E. B. Bagby on "The steadily the government employe's odd Sparrow." The sermon at 8 standard of living. If the government will be on "God's Cross standard of living. If the government had undertaken to maintain the purchasing power of the 1893 wage, it would have had to pay as much as $1.545 even in 1913, the last prewar year. In that year the actual average wage received was

War Hastens Fall.

The war accelerated the fall of the value of money so rapidly that in 1915 it would have been neces-sary to pay $1,556. In 1917, in order maintain the same purchasing power as the $1.096 wage of 1893 the average pay would have had to be $2.258, and in 1919 $2,839. Data since that date are difficult to compile, but it is estimated that approximately the same figure approximately the same figure would be set for 1920. Although prices have declined, average wages have also declined on account of the disappearances of the more highly paid war workers.

Reclassification is seen as the only way out. No definite relief can be expected from a continued de-cline in prices. "The sole question." cline in prices. "The sole question." says The Federal Employe. "now is age headed by Moses. But while there is a certain virtue in cleaving to biblical analogy, it is well to point out that the human life is somewhat shorter than in biblical times. The day of miracles being past, the federal worker cannot expect like assistance, but he will doubtless be grateful if our statesmen on The Hill' will grant some relief through reclassification pending the millenium or the return of normalcy."
